

Michael Tomz, Assistant Professor in the Department of Political Science at Stanford University, spoke to about 40 people on "The Credibility of International Commitments" on Friday, February 1, 2008, at the Mershon Center for International Security Studies.

Byungwon Woo (standing), Ph.D. student in Political Science, provides a critique of Michael Tomz's paper.

John Mueller (left), Woody Hayes Chair of National Security Studies, talks with Michael Tomz at a reception after the lecture. Listening is Yohanes Sulaiman, Ph.D. student in Political Science.

Michael Tomz's talk was part of the Globalization, Institutions and Economic Security (GIES) Workshop at the Mershon Center, organized by Alex Thompson (left) and Sarah Brooks, both Assistant Professors of Political Science.